Dear reader

SANTHARA is a five-hour limited series about a dying poet who undertakes the Jain vow of releasing the body — fasting into death with equanimity — believing it will carry him back to the wife he lost, while his children fight and then learn to watch. It is a kitchen-table epic with a Dissolution weather system inside it: Partition silence, diaspora love, and the endogenous flood of a life when the body finally stops filing years separately.

The living pitch object is at santhara.tan-peak.workers.dev. This package mirrors that tone: dark field, gold and teal, images before argument. Enclosed are scripts, bible, Dissolution appendix, lookbook, and greenlight materials.
